Vilnius

Vilnius Museum is a new venue for learning about the capital of Lithuania, dedicated to both the citizens and the city guests. The museum presents stories of the city that are unique and important, even if unknown so far.

The mission of the Museum is to nurture perceptive and knowledgeable residents of the city. Dynamic and constantly changing, like Vilnius itself, the Museum plans to put on two or three exhibitions each year, based on original studies of urban life. It invites visitors to take a closer look at the city, and discover something unexpected in its familiar spaces. www.vilniausmuziejus.lt

Xwhy / Agency of Understanding (UAB "Theoria") is an advisory group focusing on clarity and meaning. From urban planning and policy making to leadership and product innovation – the team provides understanding of context and cultures that reveals sustainable solutions. Applying methods from human sciences – philosophy, anthropology, ethnography, behavioral economics - is the way of working with private and public sectors. Company offers such services as data sense-making, stakeholder engagement, contextual consumer research, creative project writing, individual concept creation, real innovation development, sustainable strategy, creating cultures, connecting communities, workspace anthropology, creative placemaking, workshops and integral brand identity. ### Groningen Noorderlicht is a platform for contemporary observation and an inclusive stage for artists from all around the world. Here they find their way to discuss with the public and search for the limits of their profession. Their work merges with that of the non-professional, who has access to social media channels with smartphones and tries to form his or her own image of the world. Our themes are universal and related to local and international issues.

We encourage insight and engagement with artistic social stories about what touches and moves people and adds to their development. Photographic viewing is our starting point, visual culture our field of work. <http://www.noorderlicht.com>

Eleusis

CHORUS is an NGO founded to bridge arts, education and social challenges. It was established in 2016 in Eleusis, Greece, by active citizens working in culture, arts and education. Our mission is to promote humanitarian principles and values, to trigger public debate and mobilise the public on important social issues and human rights, through contemporary artistic creation, education and cultural activities.

Eleusis is the largest industrial centre of Greece. The signs of industrialisation and environmental degradation are visible on the city's urban fabric. Within UEO, CHORUS will present an artistic project that foregrounds environmental and ecological challenges. <https://chorus.org.gr>

Oulu

Lumo Light Festival is organised annually at the end of November by the City of Oulu. Based on light art and public lighting, the festival brings together multiple forms of art in an open city space in an easily accessible way for a large audience. Oulu is a city of strong contrasts – nightless nights of the midnight sun and sunless days in the heart of winter – holding 210.000 inhabitants in Northern Finland. Oulu has been selected as European Capital of Culture for 2026. www.ouka.fi

Lisbon

Arena Ensemble is a platform for the development of artistic projects that has been growing since its foundation in 2007, always revealing an awareness for risk and experimentation in the search for new theatrical and performative practices, anchored in the intersection of different artistic genres.

The work of Marco Martins, Arena's artistic director, increasingly emerges from the encounter with specific and peripheral communities with whom he develops long creative processes that challenge an economy of production and in which the lives and stories of their performers (non-actors) are the dramaturgical basis of the shows.

The name Arena means a space for combat, confrontation and action that resists specific techniques or predominant languages. The work developed implies the investment in a laboratory practice that mixes references and crosses theatre, dance, visual arts and performance through collaboration with several artists, fundamental in this dynamic. ### Dublin

The Museum of Literature Ireland (Irish: Músaem Litríochta na hÉireann), branded MoLI in homage to Molly Bloom, is a literary museum in Dublin, Ireland. Located on St Stephen's Green in University College Dublin's historic Newman House, MoLI opened to the public in September 2019. The product of a partnership between University College Dublin and the National Library of Ireland, MoLI is Ireland's first literature museum and the first museum globally dedicated to the Irish literary tradition.

Originally conceived as a James Joyce Centre, MoLI was designed as a celebration of Ireland's literary greats from over the centuries, showcasing the country's written heritage in all its glory via immersive exhibitions with an international appeal and exploring how such a small island has produced so many of the world's literary giants. MoLI is a cultural hub for Dublin – a place which inspires the next generation of writers.

It holds a permanent collection of James Joyce-related material, including his "Copy No. 1" of Ulysses, and revolving exhibitions on other Irish literary figures. With a range of audio and immersive displays, it has been nominated for and won a number of awards for design and architecture. <https://moli.ie/>

ARTS OVER BORDERS (founded in 2012 in the Irish border area) specialises in multi-arts festivals, events and public art that animate the high-profile literary heritage of this region. The organisation commissions innovative site-specific productions and newly devised work with local communities and international artists in the border landscapes either side of the 500km Irish border. Its annual festival platforms include the globally acclaimed Happy Days Enniskillen International Beckett Festival and the Lughnasa FrielFest & A Wilde Weekend which spring from the work of Irish dramatists Brian Friel and Oscar Wilde.
